

ClassACT Bulletin

September 2017

The Board of ClassACT is delighted to announce 2 brand-new member-classmates, and to share news of an initiative just getting off the ground

Leigh Hafrey and Stan Mark have agreed to come on Board!

Leigh is a lecturer at the Sloan School at MIT and a member of the faculty at Aspen Institute. He has been on the faculty of Harvard as well. He and his wife, Sandra Nadaff, current Dean of the Summer School, were Mather House co-masters from 1993 to 2010. Leigh's primary field is leadership and ethics. Leigh has been one of the anchors for the Benazir Bhutto Leadership Program, helping connect to faculty at Harvard and actively engaging with the BBLP Associates in small meetings as well as formal events. He's also interested in the Bridge program area of ClassACT, and he has reached out to classmates about possible Bridging initiatives. We find Leigh's expertise and interests grounded in a foundation of keen intellect, goodness and generosity. He makes himself available readily, brings substantive wisdom as well as a sense of humor to every conversation, figures out what needs doing, and does what he says he will do.

Stan lives in Seattle and spent a substantial part of his career in direct marketing. He is participating in the Bridge Project work group facilitated by Jonathan Sprague and will be helping develop a survey to get more useful information about ways to work with classmates. In our Communications work group, he has been invaluable in helping us think clearly about communications and database management for the near and longer term, and has been working with us as we revamp our website (to debut soon!!) Stan is very active in the HAA, both with his local club and with Harvard B-School connections. He's outgoing, energetic and shares a strong desire to see ClassACT succeed.
